How it All Began

Dawn Dubsy was diagnosed with the most deadly strand of malaria, Plasmodium falciparum after returning from a trip to Ghana Africa in 2008. While in the ICU Dawn developed further complications from septic shock, had limited circulation to her extremities, and as a result underwent surgery requiring amputation of her limbs just below the elbows and knees. Dawn realized she was a quadruple amputee approximately one month later when she came back to consciousness, and felt extremely devastated about her limb loss. To learn more about Dawn's story please visit the AAM website.
